October 8, 2004

The Honorable John Conyers, Jr. Ranking Minority Member Committee on the Judiciary U.S. House of Representatives Washington D.C. 20515

Dear Representative Conyers:

Please find enclosed responses to the questions you submitted to Assistant Attorney General R. Alexander Acosta by your letter of March 11, 2004. Assistant Attorney General Acosta provided the information responding to the majority of your questions. Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General Sheldon Bradshaw provided the information responsive to questions relating to the Texas redistricting matter. Our response to question 20 will be provided under separate cover.

Please do not hesitate to call upon us if we may be of additional assistance. The Office of Management and Budget has advised us that from the perspective of the Administration's program, there is no objection to submission on this letter.

Sincerely,

William Moschella

Assistant Attorney General

Responses to Questions Posed by Minority Members of the House Committee on the Judiciary Arising from Hearing of March 2, 2004

R. Alexander Acosta Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division

1. Data Requests

Prior to the hearing, our staff requested data on the dockets for each section of the Division. At the hearing you stated that the material had to be assembled, but would be forthcoming. When can we expect to receive this information?

How much staff time (including attorneys) was allocated to police pattern and practice investigations and litigation during this fiscal year and the previous four fiscal years, on a quarterly basis. Please note the number of attorneys in the Special Litigation Section logging time to police matters relative to the overall number of attorneys in the section for each year.

How much staff time (including attorneys) was allocated to CRIPA investigations and litigation during this fiscal year and previous four fiscal years, on a quarterly basis. Note the number of attorneys in the Special Litigation Section logging time to CRIPA matters relative to the overall number of attorneys in the section for each year.

How many investigations have been commenced against states and how many lawsuits have been filed against states since 2000. Note the name of the Attorneys General of the states in question.

RESPONSE:

For staff time dedicated to police pattern and practice and CRIPA matters, please see Attachments A and B.

With regard to CRIPA matters, there have been 52 CRIPA investigations authorized against States and political sub-jurisdictions since Fiscal Year ("FY 2000") impacting 66 facilities in 23 States. See Attachment C for Attorneys General since 2000 of the States where an investigation was authorized. There have been 15 CRIPA lawsuits impacting 24 facilities in 11 States since FY 2000. The Attorneys General since 2000 of the States where suit was brought under CRIPA include the following: Janet Napolitano (Arizona); Terry Goddard (Arizona); Mark

Pryor (Arkansas); Mike Beebe (Arkansas); Thurbert E. Baker (Georgia); Jeff Modisett (Indiana); Karen Freeman-Wilson (Indiana); Steve Carter (Indiana); Ben Chandler (Kentucky); Gregory D. Stumbo (Kentucky); Richard P. Ieyoub (Louisiana); Charles C. Foti (Louisiana); Mike Moore (Mississippi); Jim Hood (Mississippi); John Farmer (New Jersey); David Samson (New Jersey): Peter C. Harvey (New Jersey); Eliot Spitzer (New York); Paul G. Summers (Tennessee); Hoke MacMillan (Wyoming); Patrick J. Crank (Wyoming).

Since FY 2000, the Division has authorized 19 police investigations in 13 States, territories, and political sub-jurisdictions. In addition, since 2000, the Division has filed five police lawsuits against State political sub-jurisdictions.

The Docket information you requested is included as Attachment E.

2. Partial Birth Abortion Act

If upheld, the Civil Rights Division would be charged with enforcing the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act. Do you believe this is an appropriate statute for the Civil Rights Division to enforce?

Whose civil rights do you believe your division would be charged with protecting in these cases?

Do you have a plan for allocating resources to take up your enforcement duties as assigned by the Attorney General? How many attorneys do you think you would need? Which sections would be charged with doing this enforcement work?

The President's FY 2005 budget has proposed cuts to the Civil Rights Division of $1.62 million, and 15 FTEs (Full Time Equivalent Positions) [sic] From where would these resources be drawn?

How do you plan to devote resources to enforcing the Partial Birth Abortion Act in conjunction with implementing these cuts? From which areas would you draw resources in order to take on these new responsibilities?

RESPONSE

Congress enacted the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act (PBA) with an overwhelming majority in both Houses. The Division was selected as the appropriate litigating component to enforce the PBA, as it has specialized expertise in both sensitive abortion-related matters and in criminal matters generally. With respect to the elements of the ban, the Act defines the necessary elements of a criminal offense, which if sustained, the Division will enforce.

It is premature to assess what type of resources would be necessary to enforce the Partial Birth Abortion Ban, since the validity of the law is still being litigated, and enforcement has been enjoined by multiple judicial orders. The Department of Justice has the obligation to enforce the laws passed by Congress, and will make the appropriate allocation of resources to do so if and when enforcement of the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act is permitted.

3. Subpoena of Women's Health Records

As part of its legal strategy to defend the Partial Birth Abortion Act, the Department of Justice has subpoenaed the records of women who had abortions and clinics and hospitals around the country in the last two years. In those cases, the Department has argued that there is no federal common law doctor patient privilege. Is that your understanding of current law? Do you believe that patient medical records should be entitled to no doctor-patient privilege whatsoever?

RESPONSE

The Department's Civil Division, not the Civil Rights Division, is responsible for defending the constitutionality of the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act of 2003.

The Department can assure you that from the onset of this litigation, the Department had no interest whatsoever in the identity of the patients associated with the medical records. Further, the Department agrees that any information that might reveal the identity of a patient can and should be fully redacted from the medical records.

Moreover, the Department has made clear that it sought redacted medical records because the plaintiffs in the underlying case for which the records were sought themselves put the records squarely at issue in the litigation. Central to the plaintiffs' case is their argument that the banned procedure is medically necessary to preserve a woman's health. In an apparent effort to provide a more concrete basis for this assertion, the plaintiffs (or doctors affiliated with them) submitted declarations in which they offer their own clinical experiences - instances in which they contend, on the basis of their own personal knowledge, and references to specific (though unnamed) patients, that the banned procedure was appropriate for use in their practice. Because the Department of Justice has a duty to defend the constitutionality of Acts of Congress, and because the plaintiffs themselves put their own clinical experiences at issue as the centerpiece of their case, the Department subpoenaed those medical records, as the best available documentation of the plaintiffs' claimed clinical experience, in order to test their assertions that the banned procedure is medically necessary to preserve a woman's health. To ensure patient confidentiality, however, the Department agreed to and the courts entered protective orders requiring that all patient-identifying information be redacted from the subpoenaed records, and that all such records, even in redacted form, be treated confidentially, and filed under seal.

Accordingly, the benefit of subpoening the medical records and the justification for doing so is that the redacted medical records would allow the Department to test the accuracy of the plaintiffs' principal factual contention, and thereby assist the Department in carrying out its duty to defend the constitutionality of an Act of Congress.

The Department does not believe that the provision of the redacted medical records in this case -- records from which no patient identifying information could be gleaned -- would violate any recognized physician-patient privilege. The Department further agrees with the conclusion of the United States Supreme Court that "[t]he physician-patient evidentiary privilege is unknown to the common law." Whalen v. Roe, 429 U.S. 589, 602 n.28 (1977). Every United States Court of Appeals to consider the matter is in agreement with that position.

These issues are discussed in greater detail in the Department's opening and reply briefs to the United States Court of Appeals in National Abortion Federation v. Ashcroft. Those briefs are available online at the court's website (www.ca7.uscourts.gov/briefs.htm http://www.ca7) and entering the case's docket number (04-1379).

4. Discrimination in Federally Funded and Government Programs

Part of the Division's responsibilities has to do with discrimination in federally funded programs. Federal funds are, for the first time, being given to organizations that discriminate in employment on the basis of religion. These organizations are not religious organizations covered by the employment discrimination exception in section 702 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. As part of your Division's duties in advising other federal agencies, have you been consulted on this question, and if so, what role have you played and what advice have you given?

RESPONSE

It would be inappropriate to discuss either the Department's role in internal Executive Branch deliberations, or specifically what legal advice, if any, the Department of Justice has provided within the Executive Branch on this matter. Disclosure of such deliberations or advice would chill the Department's ability to provide the candid, independent, and professional legal analysis and judgment essential to full and proper Executive deliberations.

5. Office of Special Counsel Web Site

Recently the Office of Special Counsel, which is not part of the Justice Department, removed information concerning discrimination against federal employees on the basis of sexual orientation from its web site. In response to an inquiry from the Ranking Members of the Full Committee and this Subcommittee, the Special Counsel apparently believed, on the basis of a power point presentation, that the basis of the office's policy was "unclear." Are you aware of any changes in law or regulation that might have called into question this longstanding policy, especially in light of the Supreme Court's decision in Lawrence v. Texas?

RESPONSE

As the Office of Special Counsel is independent from the Civil Rights Division, we are not privy to the actual deliberations that formed the basis of the website changes to which your inquiry relates.

We do, however, note that it is extremely unlikely that the Supreme Court's decision in Lawrence v. Texas would have any effect on the particular policy at issue you raise, as Lawrence dealt solely with the constitutionality of a State law criminal prohibition on purely private conduct.

6. Housing

The Department of Housing and Urban Development's Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity program, which helps enforce title XIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Fair Housing Amendments of 1988, is slated to receive $48 million in the President's FY 2005 budget, which, according to the Budget Committee, is a cut in current services dollars of $1 million (a nominal increase of $1 million). Given the fact that HUD's allocation is essentially flat, how will the Division allocate resources to pursue the expansion of fair housing and fair lending work?

Civil Monetary Penalty Recovery - The housing and lending work undertaken by the Division is undeniably complex, time consuming and expensive. Given the budget constraints faced by the Division, would you support legislation that would allow the Division to keep a significant portion of the "civil monetary penalties" awarded in these cases, which is the norm in other enforcement areas -e.g., healthcare fraud and procurement.

RESPONSE

We work cooperatively with HUD on many cases, but also have independent authority to initiate litigation such as pattern and practice cases under the Fair Housing Act, as well as matters under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. We believe that the President's FY 2005 budget request allocates the Division ample resources to prosecute vigorously violations of these statutes.

Regarding any legislative proposal regarding civil monetary penalties, the Justice Department speaks with one voice when discussing the merits of a particular item of legislation, and if presented with such legislation would comment at the appropriate time and in the appropriate manner.

7. Civil Rights of Institutional Persons Act (CRIPA)

Since the administration has made enforcement of CRIPA priority [sic], what is your position on giving the Division subpoena power to improve enforcement capabilities?

RESPONSE

The Division actively enforces each statute enacted by Congress and entrusted to its care. The Justice Department speaks with one voice when discussing the merits of a particular item of legislation, and if presented with legislation regarding subpoena authority would comment at the appropriate time and in the appropriate manner.

8. Texas Redistricting

In your testimony before the Subcommittee, you stated the reasons for disqualification are not given by Department officials. Notwithstanding a revision of the materials enclosed in a November 21, 2003, letter from William E. Moschella, Assistant Attorney General for Legislative Affairs, we are aware of no official DOJ policy to this effect. To the contrary, during the 1992 redistricting, Assistant Attorney General John Dunne recused himself from reviewing the redistricting submission of the New York State Senate, he [sic] announced that he was doing so because he had at one time served as a State Senator in New York.

In view of that precedent, and the absence of any clear policy directive, please provide the reasons you have for disqualifying yourself from reviewing the Texas Congressional Redistricting Plan under the Voting Rights Act.

With respect to the Texas Congressional map that the Voting Rights Section precleared under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act on December 19, 2003, please provide responses, including requested materials, to the following questions. To the extent that you are unable to respond to these questions because of your recusal, please designate an individual within the Division with the knowledge and the authority to provide proper responses and direct that individual to respond.

RESPONSE

I cannot speak to the Department's review of the Texas redistricting as I am recused from that matter. It is my understanding that the Department's long-standing policy, followed by many Administrations, is that reasons for recusal are not disclosed. This case was handled by my Principal Deputy, Sheldon Bradshaw, and the career staff of our Voting Section. Mr. Bradshaw will provide information under separate cover in response to your specific questions (numbered 9, 10, and 11) regarding the Texas redistricting.

9. Joseph Rich Signature Issue

Isn't it the normal practice of the Voting Rights Section that the Division Chief signs preclearance letters? Joseph Rich, the Chief of the Section, did not sign the Texas December 19th preclearance letter. Instead, it was signed by Mr. Sheldon Bradshaw. Can you explain why Mr. Bradshaw, a political appointee, signed the letter instead of Mr. Rich, the division chief?

RESPONSE

See answer to Question 8, supra.

10. Voting Section Texas Memorandum

It has been the usual practice of the Voting Section of the Civil Rights division over the last 38 years to release, pursuant to a request under the Freedom of Information Act, copies of memoranda prepared by the Voting Section career attorneys in connection with preclearance submissions made by covered jurisdictions. A FOIA case was made for the memorandum prepared by the staff of the Voting Section in which the staff reportedly recommended an objection to the Texas congressional redistricting plan. In an unprecedented ruling, the Civil Rights Division leadership instructed the Office of Privacy and Freedom Information not to release the memorandum. What were the legal and factual basis for this decision?

The chief FOIA officer in your division, Mr. Nelson Hermanilla, recently informed an interested citizen that the professional staff of the Voting Rights Section prepared a 73-page memorandum regarding the decision to preclear the Texas plan. It appears that the professional staff, the experts who spent the most time studying the Texas submission, had a lot to say about the State of Texas' submission. In contrast, the letter from Mr. Bradshaw, the political appointee, is only three paragraphs. Does this suggest to you that the professional staff might have objected to all or part of the Texas submission?

We are formally requesting that you submit this memorandum to this Committee forthwith.

RESPONSE

See answer to Question 8, supra.

11. Gag Order

For the first time in the history of the enforcement of the Voting Rights Act, a gag order was imposed on attorneys in the Voting Section who handled the Texas congressional redistricting submission. This gag order was so strict that career attorneys were not even permitted to talk with one another about the plan, a practice they have engaged in for years in an effort to explore the factual and legal issues that can accompany a redistricting submission. Did you approve this gag order and if not who did? Also, why was it imposed? More generally, is it a common practice in the Civil Rights Division to prevent attorneys from communicating with each other?

RESPONSE

See answer to Question 8, supra.

12. Other Voting Rights Act Activities

Please indicate the number of times, since beginning of the Bush Administration, that a recommendation by the career staff of the Voting Rights Section of the Division on any submission by a State or locality under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act has been reversed, modified, or disregarded by one or more of the Division's political appointee officials. Please include: (a) all instances where approval was recommended but the Division's political appointees disapproved the submitted change or sought more information; (b) all instances where the career staff recommended that a submission be disapproved, and the Divisions [sic] political appointees approved it; (c) all instances where the career staff recommended that more information be sought from the submitting jurisdiction, yet the political appointees approved the submission without obtaining further information; and (d) all instances where the Division's political appointees sought additional information not requested by career staff. Please specify separately the number of instances in each of these categories.

RESPONSE

This question seeks information and materials which reflect the Division's internal decision-making processes. Such deliberative materials are privileged and cannot be disclosed. Indeed, the routine disclosure of such deliberative materials would chill the Division's attorneys from providing the candid, independent, and professional analysis and judgment essential to just and effective law enforcement.

13. Voting Rights Act Reauthorization

Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act will be up for reauthorization in 2007. Could you detail the administration's position on reauthorization. Do you agree that it should be reauthorized? Have you identified any changes you believe are necessary? Does the administration believe any changes are necessary?

Identify the name and filing date of each case alleging a Voting Rights Act violation(s) that the Civil Rights Division has filed under the current Administration.

Identify the name and filing date of each case alleging vote dilution under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act that the Civil Rights Division has flied under the current Administration.

Identify the number of times under the current Administration that the Assistant Attorney General (or the individual designated to act as Assistant Attorney General) has not agreed with the recommendation of the Voting Section to interpose a Section 5 objection.

Identify the number of times under the current Administration that the Assistant Attorney General (or the individual designated to act as Assistant Attorney General) has not agreed with the recommendation of the Voting Section to bring a lawsuit.

Identify the number of times under the current Administration that the Assistant Attorney General (or the individual designated to act as Assistant Attorney General) has disagreed with the recommendation of the Voting Section to cover an election. Please list the cases and reasons for the failure to follow the recommendations of the career staff.

For every recommendation made by the Voting Section in 2002 and 2003 to bring a Section 2 vote dilution lawsuit, identify the number of days that elapsed between the date the recommendation was first received by the "front office" (or, if that date cannot be identified, the date of the recommendation in the I-Memo) and the date that Assistant Attorney General (or the individual designated to act as Assistant Attorney General) either approved or disapproved the recommendation. To the extent that there are recommendations made in 2002 or 2003 which are still pending, indicate how long those recommendations have been pending.

RESPONSE

The Executive Branch speaks with one voice when discussing the merits of a particular item of legislation, and if presented with legislation regarding reauthorization would comment at the appropriate time and in the appropriate manner.

We are providing a list, as requested, of all cases or other matters that have been filed or where a judgment, consent order, or other agreement was obtained by the current Administration for Voting Rights Act violations, including Section 2 vote dilution cases. A list is also being provided of the number of OPM election observers and Division staff sent to monitor and observe elections by the Division.

Since January 20, 2001, the Civil Rights Division has either filed or obtained resolutions in fifteen cases alleging a violation of the Voting Rights Act. Cases stating a claim under Section 2 are indicated in bold. Each has been resolved by consent decree or litigated judgment. They are:

Case name	District	Filed	Method of resolution	Date
United States v. Ventura County	C.D. Cal	8/4/04	Consent decree	9/2/04
United States v. Yakima County	E.D. WA	7/6/04	Consent decree	9/7/04

United States v. Miami-Dade County	S.D. Fla.	6/17/02	Consent decree	6/17/02
United States v. Alamosa County	D. Col.	11/21/01	Judgment for defendants	11/26/03
United States v. Crockett County	W.D. Tenn.	4/17/01	Consent decree	4/17/01
United States v. Charleston County Council	D. S.C.	1/17/01	Judgment for United States	3/06/03

United States v. City of Santa Paula	C.D. Cal.	4/06/00	Settlement agreement	10/24/01
United States v. Blaine County	D. Mont.	11/16/99	Judgment for United States	3/21/03

During this same time period, two other Voting Rights Act lawsuits were approved for filing but the defendants agreed to settlements remedying the violations without litigation: a Section 2 lawsuit against the Chelsea, Massachusetts School District, and a Section 203 case against the Harris County, Texas Board of Elections.

In addition, eight other voting rights lawsuits were filed in this period: four cases alleging violations of the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) in St. Louis, Missouri; Tennessee; Pulaski County, Arkansas; and New York; and four cases alleging violations of the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA): Texas, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Georgia. All of these cases were resolved either by consent decrees or court order with the exception of the New York NVRA case which is in litigation. Two other NVRA lawsuits were authorized but not filed after the potential defendants remedied their violations before the onset of litigation.

Since January 20, 2001, the Civil Rights Division has also obtained or requested extensions of expiring consent decrees previously obtained in five actions filed under the Voting Rights Act. They are:

Case name	District	Filed	Method of resolution	Date Extended
United States v. Socorro County	D.N.M.	10/22/93	Consent decree	7/13/04
United States v. Hamtramck	E.D. Mich.	8/04/00	Consent decree	1/28/04
United States v. Passaic County and City of Passaic	D.N.J.	6/02/99	Consent decree	4/12/04
United States v. Bernallilo County	D.N.M.	2/06/98	Consent decree	7/01/03
United States v. Socorro County	D.N.M.	10/22/93	Consent decree	3/19/04
United States v. Cibola County	D.N.M.	9/20/93	Consent decree	5/3/04

With respect to election monitoring by observers from the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) authorized under Section 3(a) or Section 6 of the Voting Rights Act, as well as election monitoring by Division staff, the following information is provided:

CY	States	Political Subdivisions	Elections	OPM Observers	DOJ Staff
2001	12	19	31	396	128
2002	. 17	40	60	608	221
2003	14	26	42	380	136
2004	19	66	72	467	260

The numbers for 2004 are partial and do not include the monitoring scheduled for November, 2004. The number of elections listed reflects separate elections covered in different jurisdictions even though the elections were held on the same date. For example, while all jurisdictions had their 2002 general election on November 5, the total includes each jurisdiction where the Division had monitors as a separate election.

The balance of your questions repeats your earlier inquiries into privileged matters regarding the Division's deliberative processes, which the Department cannot disclose. As noted, the routine disclosure of such deliberative materials would chill the Division's attorneys' ability to provide the candid, independent, and professional analysis and judgment essential to just and effective law enforcement.

14. Law Enforcement Accountability

We have heard concerns that there has been retrenchment in the area of pattern and practice enforcement under Section 14141. With the notable exception of Detroit, the Division has entered a series of agreements that lack "substantial compliance" requirements, most recently in Prince George's County Maryland. Why have you departed from the 5 year consent decree, with 2 year substantial compliance, model that was followed in the past? In some place, like Cincinnati, where there was violence, there is no requirement of substantial compliance in the agreement. Please explain the justification for this departure from past practice.

RESPONSE

The Department is committed to ensuring that police departments do not engage in a pattern or practice of violating citizens' civil rights. The Department's priority is to fix the problem, not the blame. The Department endeavors to work with jurisdictions to address law enforcement issues.

The Administration has not only maintained, but in fact has significantly expanded the Department of Justice's enforcement activity under Section 14141. Since 2001, the Division has successfully resolved 14 pattern or practice matters under Section 14141, a significant increase over a comparable period during the prior three-year period. Of these, four were resolved by Consent Decree, which also represents an increase over the prior three-year period.

With regard specifically to the issue of substantial compliance, we are confident that each of our resolutions, tailored to the specific case, contains the compliance requirements necessary to effect lasting and effective law enforcement improvements in that jurisdiction.

15. Tulia, TX, Drug Sting

What happened to the Civil Rights Division investigation into events taking place in 1999 in Tulia, Texas?

What has the Civil Rights Division done, if anything, to provide oversight of the Edward Byrne Memorial Fund, the fund that underwrote the Tulia drug sting.

What has the Civil Rights Division recommended to the Edward Byrne Memorial Fund regarding racial profiling? What recommendations has the Division made with respect to steps that DOJ can take to hold local police departments accountable for their use of these types of funds?

RESPONSE

The Civil Rights Division is investigating the 1999 events in Tulia, Texas. That investigation remains active and ongoing today. The Edward Byrne Memorial Fund is administered by the Office of Justice Programs, not by the Civil Rights Division.

16. Warren, Ohio, Case

What is the status of the Warren, Ohio, Police Department investigation?

RESPONSE

We have not, to date, received a request to open, nor have we opened, an investigation into the Warren, Ohio, Police Department. However, we are conducting a preliminary inquiry to determine whether a full pattern or practice investigation is warranted pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 14141.

17. United States v. City of Buffalo

In that case, the court ordered the City to develop a valid police examination and entered a remedial applicant flow hiring order which was to remain in effect until the City developed such a test. Despite the fact that the City to this date has not shown the validity of its police exam, the Justice Department has now reversed its earlier positions in this case. The Department is now contending that the order of the court should be dissolved, irrespective of the validity of the examination or whether the exam in future applications would have an adverse impact and filed a motion with the intent to do so.

Could you please explain why the Department has now changed its position on the need to show the validity of the examination before dissolving the decree? What prompted this reversal in the Department of Justice's litigation in this matter?

DOJ filed an appeal to the Second Circuit of Judge Curtin's rejection of DOJ's argument that the remedial applicant flow hiring order and the requirement of a valid selection process was unconstitutional race conscious relief. Is it true that DOJ withdrew last month?

It is our understanding that the Department of Justice is also contending that a continuation of this applicant flow order or the hiring individuals who were to be hired pursuant to this order violates both Title VII and the United States Constitution.

In this case, Judge Curtin's June 18, 2002, order stated that "because the Government appears to have changed its position and now asserts that any appointment according to the shortfall agreement would be contrary to statute and unconstitutional, briefs shall be filed as to this problem."

Would you agree that U.S. Supreme Court's articulation that the benefits of diversity "are not theoretical but real" and that "major American businesses have made clear that the skills needed in today's increasingly global marketplace can only be developed through exposure to widely diverse people, cultures, ideas, and viewpoints" in Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 334 (2003) supports the legality of the valid selection process requirement in the Buffalo case?

Insofar as there have been no intervening Supreme Court decisions having a direct bearing on this litigation, this appears to be a strictly a [sic] policy switch within the Justice Department. Could you please describe to the Subcommittee what precipitated this change?

Can you tell the Committee if DOJ has taken this position in any other pending litigation where they are a party or if the Department plans on doing so in the future?

RESPONSE

The Department's position in this matter has been entirely consistent. United States v. Buffalo is a 25-year-old case in which the United States successfully argued that the City's selection device for police officers and firefighters had a disparate impact against Blacks, Hispanics, and women in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The United States' goal throughout the litigation has been to properly enforce Title VII, and the disparate impact demonstrated by the United States is a legal predicate to relief in that matter under Title VII.

In 1989, the United States District Court for the Western District of New York entered an "applicant flow order," requiring the City to hire a certain percentage of Black, Hispanic, and female police officers and firefighters, pending its development of a test that did not unlawfully discriminate against those groups. As we pointed out in our papers, and as all the parties agreed, parity in employment was reached in the Buffalo Police Department in 1989. Subsequently, all of the parties in the case, including the Afro-American Police Association, agreed that the written test no longer resulted in a disparate impact against Blacks, Hispanics, or women. In view of the fact that the legal predicate for further equitable relief no longer existed, Title VII dictated, and the United States therefore represented, that the City's use of its scoring model did not, and indeed could not, illegally discriminate against those groups. A test's validity cannot be put at issue where, as in that case, the objected to procedure does not result in a disparate impact.

The Court agreed with the parties that the written test used by the City to select police officers did not have a disparate impact against Blacks, Hispanics, or women. The Court also ended the prospective application of its applicant flow order to the eligible list that resulted from the written examination. However, the Court did require the City to make up a historical shortfall of seven Black police officers who would have been hired had the City complied with the Court's applicant flow order.

The United States filed a protective notice of appeal of that decision but subsequently withdrew that notice.

It is true that Judge Curtin's June 18, 2002, order stated that "because the Government appears to have changed its position and now asserts that any appointment according to the shortfall agreement would be contrary to statute and unconstitutional, briefs shall be filed as to this problem." The Judge's observation simply records the fact that previously, when the legal predicate for equitable relief was satisfied, the United States argued for such relief, but that when the legal predicate no longer was satisfied, the United States no longer argued for it. The Judge's comment thus should not be interpreted to reflect a change in policy.

With regard to the Supreme Court's decision in Grutter v. Bollinger, your question mixes dissimilar points of law. The issue in Buffalo was whether Title VII allows equitable relief from a selection method following a judicial finding of discrimination. At issue in Grutter was the constitutionality of a race-conscious higher education admissions process in the absence of such a finding. Accordingly, where a judicial finding of discrimination has been made, race conscious relief is permitted irrespective of whether the Grutter standard is satisfied.

Our only interest in the resolution of such cases is the proper enforcement of Title VII. In this context, this is best demonstrated by the fact that, while we have adopted the previously discussed position in United States v. City of Buffalo (Police), in its companion cases United States v. City of Buffalo (Fire), we continue to challenge the City's written firefighter exam under Title VII.

18. Cross Burnings

Could you supply the members of the Committee with a detailed docket on your cross burning cases?

RESPONSE

As mentioned in the hearing, we have prosecuted more than 40 defendants for cross burning. The chart in Attachment D contains a summary of these cases.

19. GAO Study

We wish to reiterate Rep. Nadler's concerns expressed during our hearing concerning cooperation with requests from the General Accounting Office. We appreciate your commitment that you will take steps to ensure timely cooperation with the General Accounting Office in its work. GAO is an arm of Congress and each request should be treated as coming from the Members themselves. Please keep us informed of your efforts to ensure appropriate cooperation with the General Accounting Office.

RESPONSE

We are committed to working with the GAO in its inquiries, and will cooperate in the appropriate manner.

20. Persons With Limited English Proficiency

During your confirmation hearing, the committee discussed the responsibility of the Civil Rights Divisions [sic] implementation of Executive Order 13166 and its guidance, Improving Services to Services for Persons with Limited English Proficiency. Since your confirmation, there have been a number of guidances [sic] that have been published that conform to the DOJ guidance that was developed under your leadership. On August 8, 2003, prior to your confirmation, The Department of Health and Human Services issued its revised guidance for comment under EO 13166. Comments on the HHS Guidance were due on January 6, 2004. It is our understanding that many of the comments that were submitted to HHS claimed that HHS guidance did not conform to the DOJ Guidance. Based on the comments received, has HHS submitted a revised guidance to your office for approval and when do you expect the final HHS guidance will be published in the Federal Register? If not, what time frame have you established with HHS to submit a revised draft guidance to your office responding to those comments?

RESPONSE

We will provide our response to this question under separate cover.

21. Positions Before the U.S. Supreme Court:

How does your office interface with other enforcement agencies, particularly the EEOC, on government positions taken before the U.S. Supreme Court?

What dictates a decision to oppose other enforcement agency positions, such as the EEOC, on positions argued before the U.S. Supreme Court?

For example, in Costa v. Desert Palace, the EEOC and the Solicitor General advocated opposite positions. Was the SG's position consistent with your office's recommendation in this case?

In the constructive discharge case currently before the U.S. Supreme Court, Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders, what position did your office recommend to the SG?

RESPONSE

The Solicitor General's Office is responsible for determining the position taken by the United States before the United States Supreme Court. In reaching its decision, the Solicitor General may seek the input of this Division, or any other involved department, agency, or office.

It is the policy of the Department of Justice not to disclose recommendations made to the Solicitor General, as doing so would compromise the Justice Department's internal deliberation process, and would hinder the frank and candid giving of legal advice necessary for the Department to effectively carry out its obligations.

Responses to Questions Regarding Texas Redistricting Posed by Minority Members of the House Committee on the Judiciary on March 11, 2004

Submitted by Sheldon Bradshaw Principal Deputy, Civil Rights Division United States Department of Justice

The answers to these questions have been submitted by Mr. Bradshaw rather than Assistant Attorney General Acosta because AAG Acosta has been recused from the matter to which these questions pertain.

9. Joseph Rich Signature Issue

Isn't it the normal practice of the Voting Rights Section that the Division Chief signs preclearance letters? Joseph Rich, the Chief of the Section, did not sign the Texas December 19th preclearance letter. Instead, it was signed by Mr. Sheldon Bradshaw. Can you explain why Mr. Bradshaw, a political appointee, signed the letter instead of Mr. Rich, the division chief?

RESPONSE

It has been the longstanding practice of the Civil Rights Division – regardless of Administration – to have all pre-clearance or objection letters on state-wide redistricting plans signed by the Assistant Attorney General or the individual designated to act in his place. The process followed in the review of the Texas plan and the letter of determination sent to Texas was entirely consistent with this practice.

10. Voting Section Texas Memorandum

It has been the usual practice of the Voting Section of the Civil Rights division over the last 38 years to release, pursuant to a request under the Freedom of Information Act, copies of memoranda prepared by the Voting Section career attorneys in connection with preclearance submissions made by covered jurisdictions. A FOIA case was made for the memorandum prepared by the staff of the Voting Section in which the staff reportedly recommended an objection to the Texas congressional redistricting plan. In an unprecedented ruling, the Civil Rights Division leadership instructed the Office of Privacy and Freedom Information not to release the memorandum. What were the legal and factual basis for this decision?

The chief FOIA officer in your division, Mr. Nelson Hermanilla, recently informed an interested citizen that the professional staff of the Voting Rights Section prepared a 73-page memorandum regarding the decision to preclear the Texas plan. It appears that the professional staff, the experts who spent the most time studying the Texas submission, had a lot to say about the State of Texas' submission. In contrast, the letter from Mr.

Bradshaw, the political appointee, is only three paragraphs. Does this suggest to you that the professional staff might have objected to all or part of the Texas submission?

We are formally requesting that you submit this memorandum to this Committee forthwith.

RESPONSE

The Freedom of Information Act requests submitted regarding this matter were processed by our chief FOIA officer, Nelson Hermilla, following the normal and usual procedures applicable to all such requests. In keeping with longstanding practices, followed by multiple Administrations, we do not release under FOIA materials subject to privilege. As Mr. Hermilla clearly stated in his responses, he "determined that access should be denied pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5) because the memorandum would not be discoverable in litigation and consists of predecisional deliberative material; and pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C) because disclosure of portions of the memorandum could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

With regard to the pre-clearance letter, it was similar in content and length to all other pre-clearance letters issued by the Division to pre-cleared jurisdictions in countless other cases.

11. Gag Order

For the first time in the history of the enforcement of the Voting Rights Act, a gag order was imposed on attorneys in the Voting Section who handled the Texas congressional redistricting submission. This gag order was so strict that career attorneys were not even permitted to talk with one another about the plan, a practice they have engaged in for years in an effort to explore the factual and legal issues that can accompany a redistricting submission. Did you approve this gag order and if not who did? Also, why was it imposed? More generally, is it a common practice in the Civil Rights Division to prevent attorneys from communicating with each other?

RESPONSE

Your question mischaracterizes the Division's actions in this matter. Indeed, a "gag order" of the nature your question suggests would not only be counter productive but likely unworkable in practice. The Division imposed no such order.

In each case, the Division does take the appropriate and reasonable steps necessary to protect the confidentiality of its case review. For myriad understandable reasons, Division policy prohibits disclosure of any and all internal deliberations. Moreover, Division attorneys are bound by their professional and ethical obligations to maintain the confidentiality of all privileged materials and information, including attorney work product and attorney-client communications. Hence, all Division personnel are already prohibited from discussing internal deliberations concerning all Section 5 matters or any other matter with persons outside the Department.

On occasion, the Division receives a redistricting submission of particular public interest, regarding which it is evident from the outset that there will be significant press interest and pressure. The Division faced such a high profile matter in 2002 when reviewing a Mississippi redistricting plan. And, at that time, some newspaper stories strongly suggested that internal deliberative details were, in fact, leaked to the press.

Mindful of that precedent, and facing another high-profile submission in Texas, the Division took practical and sensible steps to protect the privileges and ethical obligations due its client, the United States. Accordingly, the Voting Section Chief, Joe Rich, took several steps to ensure the confidentiality of internal, privileged deliberations. One of these steps was to direct lawyers working on the matter not to discuss their work with others not working on the case so as to minimize the chance of an unauthorized disclosure of internal deliberations. In light of the facts, this was not only reasonable, but indeed accorded with good professional legal standards.

Contrary to your assertion, the team of lawyers actually working on the matter was, of course, permitted to communicate regarding the factual and legal issues of their review.
